Hurray for the EP of our own Dutch The Sin Committee with its beautiful artwork and kick-ass songs!

Archaic magazine

...Fans of progressive metal definitely need to hear this EP.

Metal Territory

... one hopes that they sign the right deal, which, on this evidence is just around the corner.

The Sin Committee (TSC) is a progressive metal quartet from the Nijmegen, the Netherlands, in whose music influences can be heard from bands such as Tool, Mastodon, Opeth en System of a Down. Characteristic for the music of TSC are the non-standard song structures and dynamics between melodic parts with clean vocals and more brutal sections with grunting. While the band, founded in 2006, recorded its first EP "Wormwood" (2007) by itself, they worked with producer Erwin Hermsen of Toneshed Recording Studio for their new EP "Confess". Confess was released on March 2009 and was really well received by both the Dutch and international press. With a strong EP in their pocket and lots of positive reviews, the gentlemen of TSC mean business. Their aim is simple: to take the band to the next level and do what they do best: playing energetic live shows.

I can't name the best song of the record as all five songs are of the same high calibre and make me really looking forward to a complete album of the Dutchman!

With Confess the band delivers a strong record with tons of diversity and strong song-progresions..

Teeth of the Divine

The songs are hummably melodic and catchy, yet rip-your-face-off heavy in places. It's just one hell of a good EP

The guys from TSC have really recorded one cool disc.

Furyrocks

Confess' sounds very professional and the four members also did a good job with the artwork, that looks really fine.

Scarred for life

[with Confess]... The Sin Committee has prepared its own unique soup that tastes intensive and interesting.
